NYC to offer low-cost healthcare to uninsured immigrants

New York will become one of the first major U.S. cities to expand low-cost healthcare to uninsured immigrants regardless of their legal status under a pilot program to launch next spring. Mayor Bill de Blasio said last Thursday. According to Reuters, the pilot, called Direct Access, will initially apply to 1,000 immigrants. Some of them are in the country legally but still ineligible for support under the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, popularly known as Obamacare. The program is expected to expand in the following years. Turn to page 8

‘Becoming president is plan of God, not man’: Pacquiao

By MANNY CABALLERO
Exclusive to the Filipino Reporter

The spirituality of boxing icon and Congressman Manny Pacquiao was evident throughout the hour-long Question-and-Answer that the legendary boxer and members of the New York and Fil-Am media conducted at Asia Society in New York City on Oct. 12.

Pacquiao was in New York to receive the prestigious Asia Game Changer Award from Asia Society given at the United Nations. Turn to page 11

Roxas, Robredo formalize '16 tandem

By PATRICIA LOURDES VIRAY and ROSETTE ADEL

MANILA — Former Interior and Local Government Secretary Manuel “Mar” Roxas II and his running mate, Camarines Sur Rep. Maria Leonor “Leni” Robredo, on Thursday filed their certificates of candidacy for the 2016 national elections.

President Benigno Aquino III earlier endorsed Roxas as the standard-bearer of the ruling Liberal Party (LP) and will seek presidency.

Roxas, meanwhile, chose Camarines Sur Rep. Maria Leonor “Leni” Robredo as his running mate. Turn to page 14

AARP survey: Stressed NYC Asian-American Gen X, Boomers struggling to save for retirement

Nearly two-thirds of New York City's Asian-American Gen-Xers and Baby Boomers say they are worried about having enough money to live comfortably when they retire, saying the high cost of living, paying for education, and other expenses are making it difficult. Turn to page 10

58 Aklan mothers die in 100,000 live births

By BOY RYAN S. ZARAL

KALIBO, Aklan — Data from the Department of Health (DOH) shows Aklan ranked third with the highest maternal mortality rate among the six provinces in the region.

Aklan had an average of 58.48 maternal deaths per 100,000 live births, lower than the average of 90 per 100,000 live births in Western Visayas.

Pregnancy and childbirth are among the leading causes of death, disease and disability in women of reproductive age in developing countries.

Maternal deaths or mothers dying during child birth are common. Turn to page 10
